
From Scott Boren in missiorelate:

I am far more interested in discovering a way of life together by encouraging the leaders within a specific situation to follow the guidance of the Holy Spirit to discover and embrace the most productive missional form.

To generate a new story, we must focus on the formation of people...characters who live out the story of mission. Another word for this is discipleship.

Small groups for the sake of small groups will always be blown by the wind of culture. But small groups for the sake of discipleship have a deeper transformational, and missional purpose.

Discipling for Mission

A one-day discipleship seminar for pastors, small group leaders, and others trying to implement a discipleship process in the church.

March 10, 2012
New Life Church
New Lenox, IL

Sponsored by the Home Missions Central U.S.
Regional Team.

Why is discipleship so crucial to the future of the church in America?

Scott Boren asks a new set of questions that move beyond the next formula for successful missional small groups to equipping people to experience a life with others and God that makes a difference in the world. Leaders will be introduced to some key principles and basic tools that help develop a discipleship process which fits their local context, demographics, and tradition. They will begin the process of identifying essential “next steps” in order to move forward in a contextualized process of developing disciples of Jesus.

How are we going to create a culture of discipleship that will form people for mission? Prepare yourself for a shift in mindset regarding discipleship.
